ISO 14001

Environmental

There is no escaping the fact that climate change is the biggest environmental threat facing today's modern society.

Businesses in the UK are responsible for over half of the total overall carbon emissions produced each year. The sooner we start addressing this issue the quicker the environment will benefit.

One way businesses can show their commitment to the environment is by adopting an Environmental Management System, namely ISO 14001. By adopting the standard not only does the environment gain, there are also significant business benefits, some which are highlighted below:

- Reduction of waste and resources, whilst also saving you money
- Potential reduction of public liability insurance costs
- The EMS will help ensure you are up-to-date with all current legislation
- Your business may find it easier to raise investment from financial institutions that want to see businesses controlling the impact they have on the environment
- The EMS will show your customers that you are committed to the environment, and may give you a competitive advantage over your closest competitors without ISO 14001
- Increasingly larger businesses and many Government Departments will only work with those businesses that have ISO 14001 certification
