Information Security

Is your business under attack? Most businesses today rely heavily on technology to operate successfully.

We are all aware of the benefits technology brings, but often do not fully understand how to protect its vulnerability.

Data and information technology are under constant attack from an ever increasing range of threats. Whilst the majority of businesses have some form of defence against this attack, very few have had their systems independently certified as complying with best practice standards.

We have all heard of the stories in the newspapers where sensitive data has gone missing or laptops stolen and are completely horrified that this can happen. Now ask yourself, can this happen within your business?

- Do you know what information is stored on your company laptops?
- Can malware be uploaded onto your system by USB drives?
- Has that employee who left taken any vital information with them?

Having second thoughts? Well now may be the right time to consider adopting the recognised Information Security System ISO 27001.

This ensures that procedures are put into place to safeguard valuable information held by the business.
